Music Programming

11/5/71

WBAI Manager of Programs:

Congrats on your new policy of having good music in the morning. Wonderful! This is far better than re-hashes of old news stories. We need music like this very badly nowadays to heal our souls so we can then battle for justice more effectively.

I'm glad you have discovered that simply because this vitally needed balm for the soul is so easy to put on the air, it is no less necessary. No other radio station offers it.

Allan Black

11/2/71

Mr. Goodman,

Throughout the years I've appreciated BAI's Music Programming. Now however, whether thru my raised consciousness, that is social consciousness, on your programming, I think there's too much music on BAI. It's all too easy to lose oneself in too much music. I'd like to see programs in the genre of public affairs.

Thank you
Anonymous

This doesn't answer how I treat women. But like there are many undecipherable differences between the sexes, an attitude based on such things is unexplainable.

A way of saying this is that I would treat a homosexual man and a heterosexual man the same way. But I can't treat males and females in the same exact manner.

All of the above is poorly written since I have trouble expressing ideas.

The above ideas are also my philosophy and goals for my behavior. I have to admit that my world has taught me to treat people in illogical fashions.

truly yours,
Michael Starobin
(Listener-Suscriber)

P.S. As for your objections in the article: just what is it that the male power clique of your station is doing that is prejudiced? What are the specific problems?

Also when men crack jokes about women, I don't think they are unconsciously putting down women.

I am a good Jew and I've heard many jokes about the Jewish people. I laugh at these jokes. They are not funny because they point at something different or unequal. They are funny on the idea of humor.

Dear Sirs,

As a fully committed supporter of WBAI from its inception, I would like to protest in the strongest terms against the waste of folio space and reader's patience on such nonsense as the letters of Lisa Cowan.

This kind of muddle-headed freshman blather should be confined to the High school lunchroom. It is possible that at some time in the future Miss Cowan may be able to formulate an idea, but until that date I think that it is not too much to ask that she do her practicing on her own time.

Sincerely,

Liza's Letter

11-3-71

Nov. 10, 1971

Liza—

After my November folio had laid around in my room for a week, I finally got around to reading the articles in it.

You speak of exploitation. How? In what way?

I feel the main reasons why men have trouble accepting the woman's consciousness movement is that the many demands are very vague.

I've heard women demanding for equal pay and equal opportunities in all aspects. I think most people agree and abide by that idea.

I've heard the yells for women to be treated as equals of men. I treat women as women.

I realize that last statement smells of being strongly chauvinistic. But I didn't mean it that way. To me the human race is two equal sexes. Of course the main way I relate to people is what they are as individuals. But I always treat and act toward men and women equally yet differently.

How do I treat women? I don't treat them as the soft sex or the inferior sex or the weak sex. I treat women as the females of my species. And the treatment as a female is determined by the females physical (resulting in psychological and emotional) differences. These differences aren't inferior or undesirable. They are just different.

Dear Liza Cowan—

Just read your 9/28/71 letter to the staff and listeners. Bravo! You have courage. And of course you're right about sex discrimination on BAI — it's evident to listeners, too.

But isn't it great that they printed your letter!

Sincerely yours
Marion Glass

STATION NOTES

On Thursday evening, January 28, at 8:15, you will hear an experimental arrangement of program materials, as yet untitled. It has no title, I think, because rather than thinking of it as a specific program we are playing with the idea of changing our normal and traditional way of blocking out an evening. Now, programs are divided categorically and usually that means departmentally. After the evening NEWS, we play a Public Affairs program, then one from a special interest group like WOMANKIND, then a concert, then a radio drama. That's a hypothetical evening. The special interest programs are almost always 30 minutes long, as are the radio plays. We intend to break down the categories and integrate the news, the opinions, and the culture. For many reasons. They are connected and probably are enhanced by planned juxtaposition. Because of that enhancement, each segment (from Public Affairs, Drama and Literature, and Music) can probably be shorter. I think every program can be shorter and, thereby, better. Also, I've become convinced that in most cases, you listen to the radio when you happen to be home and nothing else requiring your ears is going on. If the telephone rings you pick it up. If you're dirty, you go take a shower. You are in and out. So the program's segments should move faster and if they are interrelated, you won't miss the whole thing altogether if you can't get your friend off the phone quickly. So, on Thursday evening, January 28, at 8:15, you'll hear a documentary report on V.A. HOSPITALS, selections from a Free Music Store Concert, a segment of a radio dramatization of Dalton Trumbo's JOHNNY GOT HIS GUN, and timely coverage of news events interspersed with comments, readings, reviews, etc., that fit in with the "theme" of the evening. A single producer, in this case Dan Kavanaugh, will be in charge of the final mix of the pre-produced segments. Listen, and if you like it, write us. Write even if you don't like it.

WBAI is obviously an appropriate medium for the non-linear. But it fails the visual: that is, the artists and photographers among you. We have a solution. We invite you visual ones to contribute art work to the FOLIO. (Also, in the next few issues we may print work contributed to us before we had so much space. In some cases the artist's name has been mislaid and no credit line will appear. If you find the work you dropped off a long time ago in one of our future issues, don't get angry . . . just contact Bonnie Bellow and she will make amends.)

Beginning in January, two regular radio theater series, formerly broadcast on Friday nights, are being moved to Tuesday evenings at 11 P.M. THE RADIO will be heard on the second and fourth Tuesdays, January 11th and 25th, and UNDER THE GUN on the third Tuesday, January 18th. These two cornerstones of what was once "the Friday night block" are being broadcast at different times to desegregate radio drama from the arts ghetto. Also for this month, SOUND POETRY will be heard at 11:30 on those same Tuesday evenings, hopefully creating an hour of intense but contrasting programming.

Listen to FOOD. It is being produced by Carole Getzoff, who taught cooking classes and is very experienced with macrobiotic diet. It will be on Fridays, January 21 and 28, at 9 P.M.

DIARY: Personal is Political

Mary Walker, 1871.

The Diary of WOMANKIND: Locked Doors Conflagrations and Success

My friend had a dream that she aborted and when she opened the sack instead of a fetus she found a little black sneaker.

From the Diary of Gail Kuenstler

Reading women's diaries is not all roses. First, women won't even send their diaries to us. And why not? Not, as you might suppose, because their diaries are too private, but because they are not good enough. Who is to be the judge of this? Something locked in a desk drawer is neither good or bad; it is merely safe, safe from blame, from praise, and from change.

One woman we know dealt with the question of whether her diary would ever be interesting to herself or to other women with great finality: She burned it on her wedding day. "A fresh start," she said. The diary series has turned up a number of such conflagrations. Lady Mary Wortley Montagu spent the days of her old age writing memoirs which, she assures us in her letters, she burned at the end of each day's composition. Daughters have burned their mother's diaries to avoid scandal. Susan B. Anthony had so many letters and private papers at the end of her eventful life that a whole bonfire was necessary to get rid of them all.

We started looking for women's diaries and letters because we were looking for where all the creativity of women may have gone to during all these relatively silent centuries. And sure enough, the diaries are wonderful. The experiences are all there, but so is the repression. As if men haven't had enough of a destructive effect on women's writing by denying them a public life — (men, of course, have been the worst letter and diary burners of all) — women take over the job of criticism and immolate themselves. One of the many women who wrote to WOMANKIND about keeping a journal said,

Keeping a journal has not, I feel, really "helped" me in any way. Instead of making me know my own mind, it has made me feel that my mind is a fragmented maelstrom of conflicting ideas and opinions.

This letter was signed "occupant" of a suburban address (no doubt the modern version of "anon") and might just as well have been signed "has-no-faith-in-herself-for-excellent-well-thought-out-reasons." What is the mind for if not to detect our errors and burn them, quick?

So women diarists have taken us at WOMANKIND on some interesting detours in our quest for their diaries. Nevertheless, when we finally get our hands on them, most of the diaries we see are full of excitement, of the ridiculous, of love. In spite of all the self-doubt and the pain, it seems that diary writing is often much more than the usual outpouring of griefs one might expect. Writing turns out to be a form of strength. Anyone who writes believes in her own importance in some way, however provisional.

Last year we spent most of our time talking about those few women whose diaries or letters actually made it into print, people like Alice James, Anais Nin, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, Charlotte Forten, etc. This year we will continue this aspect of the series with the diaries and letters of such women as Jane Carlyle, Virginia Woolf, Dorothy Wordsworth, Madame de Sevigne, and so forth, but we will also try to hear more and more from those diary burners and anonymous "occupants" who are writing now, with no audience, and sometimes without even any feminist consciousness to help them along.

As Lou Gallo says, "like you're nobody," but if you send us a piece of your diary to look at, you might just end up on the radio anyway, talking to all those other nobodies, women who are writing and thinking in embattled privacy.

Ann Snitow

My Grandmother's Journal

Last year I rediscovered my grandmother's journal and read it on WBAI. I say rediscovered because that document had been collecting dust in various closets and trunks in my house for years and I had already read it several times over the years. But when I dug it out and read it last year it was as if I was reading it for the first time.

Things that I had always accepted about it suddenly leaped off the page at me — like the fact of her suddenly uprooting herself from a life and a career that she loved to go West and join her husband in an incredibly hard life on the prairie, for which she was totally unsuited. I had always accepted that, never really thought about it. Now I saw it in the framework of a woman's life in that period — the things that were expected, demanded of her, the way her life was limited and circumscribed. I read with new eyes the description of the way she spent her days on the prairie, the kind and amount of work she did — the washing of clothes, baking, sewing, cooking for ten or twenty people, coping with dust storms, blizzards, prairie fires, tornadoes. I realized that this little brown notebook that had always been just "my grandmother's journal" was a window into a life and that thousands of other women must have lived that kind of life and what did we know about them?

This led me to start looking in libraries and antiquarian bookstores for women's diaries and letters. And I found them — lots of them. Most of them had to be researched for and brought up from the basements of libraries and many of them had their pages still uncut! One of these, THE DIARY OF MARY RICHARDSON WALKER, will be on WBAI this month, on Friday evenings at 8 P.M. Mary Richardson Walker was a missionary's wife in Old Oregon, and one of the first white women to cross the Rocky Mountains. Her Diary is extremely personal, detailed, beautifully written, honest, humorous, observant, trenchant and heart-breaking. I hope people will listen and be as fascinated as I was.

If diaries and letters have been called women's "literature," surely they are women's history, too. Since our historians have chosen to ignore the history of one half of the human race, we must look to women's diaries and letters to find out what their lives were like in any given period of history. We hope to bring this material to you on WBAI in the coming months. And if some of you remember that you have a diary or a bunch of old letters from a grandmother, please send it on to us.

In working with Ann Snitow and Brett Vuolo it has occurred to me that many of you must keep diaries that I would love to peek at; and you, at some level, must want to show me at least some of your scribbling. So far, the radio has tended to be confined to institutions, officials, activists, and the famous. There is more to life, and on-the-air phone calls do not usually tap that other part of it. Most often the subject and length of the phone calls are defined by someone else. The program producer or the other ringing phones (actually, flashing lights in this case). Please send us a sample portion of your diary. "Diary," c/o Nanette Rainone, WBAI-FM, 359 East 62nd Street, New York, New York 10021.

A Semi-accurate Recollection

THON ALICE

By Steve Post

It was back in the Spring of '65. Before Black Power and Women's consciousness. Between Richard Nixons. When the "Civil Rights" movement was so respectable it didn't want its name hooked up with "peaceniks." It was the First Coming of Love, Peace, and Brotherhood. When pot led to heroin, and Timothy Leary was a college professor, and Tex Antoine was a weatherman. Way back then.

And, at WBAI, Steve Post was the bookkeeper. Or so the management thought — until the great summer audit. I'd been WBAI's bookkeeper against my will, and despite my lack of qualifications and ability, for seven months — since December of 1964. Four months later, having reached my level of incompetence, I lost the accounts payable book. Otherwise I'd still be the bookkeeper. And WBAI would be re-cycled scrap metal.

Chris Albertson was the Station Manager, having reached his level of incompetence. Chris Koch was the Program Director, and Dale Minor, Director of Drama and Literature. Larry Josephson was a volunteer lugging an Ampex 601 by subway to record Rollo May lectures at the New School. Paul Fischer was a cub reporter for the Hunter College Arrow. Bob Fass had just become a staff announcer again, having been fired by an earlier Station Manager. And he'd just started his second round of RADIO UNNAMEABLE — once a week, as a volunteer. THE OUTSIDE wasn't even a gleam in its father's eye. Saturday at midnight the Folio (when you got it) offered THE INSIDE, with Uncle Chris (Albertson) — certainly the finest late night radio program of its time. In the morning at 99.5 you could wake up to the voice of poet A. B. Spellman (the station still gets dozens of mailing-list-crap pieces a day addressed to both Mr. and Miss A. B. Spellman) reading early angry black poetry, giving news headlines off the A. P. wire, playing jazz or blues, or talking to a guest. It was a weird way to wake up. But then again, Josephson's a bit unusual himself.

It was way back then. The only asset I brought to the bookkeeper's job was the ability to bull-shit my way around the creditors. A not-to-be-looked-on-lightly ability at WBAI. (The same ability, slightly refined, that I've applied so often on Saturday and Sunday nights.) I'd done it to them all — Con Edison, Ma Bell, the Folio printer, tape supplier, typewriter repairman, landlord, butcher, baker, etc. But I reached my level of incompetence at that task the day the man from the Internal Revenue Service showed up. It may have been his suit that threw me, or maybe his crewcut, or the bulge at his hip. He wanted to know why we hadn't paid our payroll withholding tax for the past three quarters. I told him we didn't have the money. He wanted to know why we didn't have the money we had withheld. I tried to explain to him that we never withheld it because we never had it.

It was hopeless. He insisted we were breaking the law. I thought about trying to tell him how some laws are morally wrong — but I wasn't sure about that myself at the time. But he was sympathetic. He told me and the Station Manager we had till the first of July to cough up the $30,000 or so. After that they'd come in and padlock the equipment.

It didn't look good. We literally did not have a dime in the bank, with about $60,000 in accounts payable. The summer was coming, the creditors were closing in on us, and income was running no more than $100 a day. The staff was at each other's throats. Internal politicking was consuming more of the staff's time and energy than programming. You could tell by just listening to the station.

It was under these circumstances that Chris Albertson called an emergency meeting of the staff, in his office on the first of three floors then occupied by WBAI, at good old East 39th Street. (My first day at work Albertson had told me not to bother filing some papers because the station would be moving out soon. That's the kind of blind optimism, in the face of all contrary knowledge and information, that had made and/or kept WBAI what it is and/or isn't today.)

Albertson laid out the problem, which surprised no one, since the staff, at the time had a superbly functioning grapevine. (I, big mouth that I've always been, was an important grape on the vine, passing along what I knew and could understand about financial matters. But don't spread it around.) No doubt WBAI had had financial crises before, during its five years as a listener-sponsored station, but none so large and immediate as this. Coincidentally, we had never yet had a marathon.

There were special attempts at fund raising — on the air and off. There were small benefits, and well-heeled supporters of the station held fund raising parties to which they invited their well-heeled friends. On the air, there were special days of live programming with lots of pitching. But always it was done "tastefully" — Pacifica style — that is, dignified, impersonal, and boring. It took two weeks to line up and schedule guests and programs, and the events rarely raised more than a thousand dollars. It was obvious to the assembled staff that they'd never yet done whatever it was that needed to be done if WBAI was to survive past July 1, 1965.

What had to be done was also obvious, though the staff, to a man and woman (yes, even then there were some around), detested the idea of interrupting programming to pitch and plug (or plug and pitch) around the clock. Many had rejected careers in the mass media because they found singing for their supper so distasteful. This "marathon" thing more than smacked of that — and of Jerry Lewis selling diseased children to the highest bidder of guilt. The staff, then as now, was reluctant, even at death's door, to compromise what they saw as their "integrity." And, like today's staff, they had difficulty perceiving that "integrity" as what it sometimes really was and is — pompous, egotistical, and elitist. But then, as now, they came through.

If the station was to survive, this "marathon," as they organically and uncreatively named it, would have to be. Objectionable as it was to the staff, and probably would be to the listeners. And no one even knew if it would work.

There was little discussion of methods and structures. The goal was set — $25,000 — the absolute minimum necessary for the station's survival. The dominant feeling around the station was gloom. We had no idea how large or tolerant the audience was, and because there were bad feelings ("vibes, man") internally, the staff tended to project those feelings onto the audience.

Finally, it became clear, the marathon had to begin within 48 hours. No one on staff had seen a paycheck in months, Con Ed was threatening to cut our power, and Ma Bell was poised ready to disconnect our cosmic trunk line. Without our friends the "public utilities," it was back to batteries, tin cans, and string.

From here on my memory, as it does when looking back on all marathons, gets fuzzy. But fuzzy is the nature of marathons, and the first set the pace. I can't remember exactly when it started, but it wasn't long after the meeting, during the first days of June, 1965. Nor do I remember whose voice began it all, or even care, save for the sake of esoteric historical accuracy.

The dominant theme and feelings, internally and externally during the first marathon, were desperation, chaos, and hostility. No one knew or cared what anyone else was doing, saying or feeling. It was, to use the words of Bob Fass at a staff meeting six years later, "every fucker for himself." On the air Albertson, already insecure about his position and feeling the rumblings of staff revolt, rarely left the studio during the four or five days, trying to keep "his" microphones safe from dissenting staff voices. (The ultimate paranoid fantasy of a Pacifica station manager must be to have the station "liberated" from his managership by the staff on the air, during Report to the Listener.)

But despite Albertson's watchful mouth, others did get on the air. Hundreds of others. Almost anyone who walked in off the street. Even Judy Collins came around that year. In fact, she had so much free time in those days she was doing a weekly show for us. Pete Seeger was there too, as he has been faithfully and beautifully every time we've needed his help. But I mean everyone — everyone who came in with a contribution was brought into the studio, or wandered in. Volunteers, musicians, writers, artists, fading celebrities (Lamparski carried Connie Boswell up three flights of stairs to the studio), talented and untalented, paraded, crawled, pushed, shoved, kicked, scratched, and bit their way in and out of our one tiny studio, as much to help themselves as the station. Bodies of all kinds could be found sprawled on the floor, drooped over tape recorders, and curled up under the studio table, sleeping, fucking, kicking meditating, all at once or one at a time. It was an anarchist's circus.

And when it was over we had a station piled so high with objects, decaying food, and general filth that it never really recovered (we probably brought some of it to 62nd Street with us), and a staff so tired and bitter that it never really recovered. We also had broken with some of the more meaningless Pacifica traditions — we had begun to talk to the audience as people talk to people, rather than simply dropping information on a random mass.

The $25,000 saved the station — that is, the institution. But it was also the beginning of the end of the First Age of Excellence at WBAI. Two months later, Chris Koch, against the wishes and without the knowledge of the Station Manager, became one of the first American journalists to enter North Vietnam. The tapes he returned with, and the disputes over their broadcast which followed, precipitated the resignations of half the staff, and the cancellation of more than a third of the subscriptions (almost 4,000). Finally, under pressure, Albertson himself resigned, clearing the way for the coming of the Second Age of Excellence.

But that was way back then. By the time you read this, it will be January, 1972, the second month of my eighth year with WBAI. But Tex Antoine is still a weatherman. So is Bernadine Dohrn. Timothy Leary was a Black Panther. The Civil Rights movement turns up occasionally in history books, and Hubert Humphrey is a "Peacenik." The Second Coming of Love, Peace and Brotherhood has come and gone. Thon # 29 was, possibly, the first public announcement of the Third Coming, tentative though it is, as Thon Alice was of the Second. Keep tuned to WBAI for further details as they happen.....

Visual Poetry

The poems on this page are part of A SYMPOSIUM ON VISUAL POETRY, produced by Ruth Rotko, to be broadcast Sun., Dec. 23, 7:00 PM. They are the works of the four participants – Richard Kostelanetz, Elise Asher, N. H. Pritchard and Jonathan Price. They have been printed so that the listener can better appreciate a predominantly visual art form, and radio can overcome its own limitations.

A Message from V. Johnson Van Cliburn and Gornisht Van Helfin

To Listeners of TECHIE TIME

Illustration by Marc Nadel.

About two years ago Gornisht and I began to concretize, from a number of prior influences, a radio idiom which expressed our senses of humor in a truly radio way. In a manner of speaking, we did not "invent" TECHIE TIME out of hole cloth. We owe votes of thanks to such clear-sighted maniacs as Ernie Kovacs, Dickie Goodman (no relation), Chris Albertson, the Marx Brothers, Mx. Pector (1), the Lone Ranger and Mr. Bender.

The coming together of all these, and more, in the warped context of what we consider funny, produced, in time, an idiom that was meaningful for you as well as us. It freaks us out when listeners (for example see B. Gourian 1971) tell us that they too (and not just us) get some laffs, and sensually enjoy the stereo. T.T. is funny, silly, absurd, retrospective, intro and extrospective (if there is such a word), amusing, abusing and confusing. The program has some faithful listeners to whom we are grateful for their obvious sensitivity and ability to recognize Great Art. We wonder how with these faculties they can listen to T.T. But wonder becomes mayonnaise in a galaxy of Russian dressing. And. . . .

"The time has come", consensus said, "to speak of other things; of News and Jails and Savages and death upon the wing; and why the boys march off to die and why Dollar still is king." (2)

It takes from fifteen to thirty hours to produce a good T.T. This means that between the two of us, a great deal of time and some skill is bound up in the bi-monthly, fifteen-minute segment. Productio ad absurdum.

Over the past month or so, the staff (including V. J. and Gornisht) made a conscious decision to improve our overall service to our listener-sponsors. The upshot of too much discussion was that more Produced Programs (P.P., if you will,) would help a great deal. If we were to channel the energy spent on T.T. into other projects there would be a greater impact on our radio service than if we were to continue to produce T.T.

You may have noticed that we were only folio-ed once for December. We will not be back this month. What you will see, hopefully, is improved radio, with the help of audio production when appropriate. This will mean more produced Public Affairs Programs (P.A.P.—if you will), more Radio Drama and a number of productions that would not have been possible were Cli-Fin tied up with putting T.T. together.

TECHIE TIME will return, however, at irregular intervals when we can get the time together; perhaps every other month. If we produce one, it will get some advance notice on the air so that if you are still interested you'll be able to tune it in.

For the time being we thank you for your attention and hope that you'll enjoy and find meaningful the new work that we shall be doing over the coming months. It is this that is important: after all, if this isn't what this is, then what is it (3)?

Yours,
John Foster Dull O'Witz
and
Ben de Soleil

Among the invited participants to the conference was the director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, who declined to participate, claiming: "we are declining in view of our serious doubt that any worthwhile purpose could be served by an FBI representative attending an inquiry casting him in the role of defendant." Of the over 15 hours of testimony resulting from that conference, the highlights will be broadcast on January 16, at 12:30 P.M.
